The Aniyah Series is a series of books designed to educate, entertain and enlighten today's youth. The series has been approved by the Board of Education for grades K – forth and can be found in classrooms and libraries. The series is used to teach math, language, reading comprehension, morals, creative writing and special needs children. Steffi Literary Publishing LLC uses illustrators, musicians and actors to visit the educational facilities and perform for children all over. This service is available to schools, churches, daycares, hospitals, book signings, block parties, etc... The series is available in English, Spanish, French, Mandarin, Arabic, German, Braille and Audio. The main character, Aniyah is a five year old urban Afro-American positive role model with an international message. Her friends are diverse in ethnicity.

The legendary Stevie Wonder premiered the audio version and promoted the book on his radio talk show “KJLH, 102.3 FM”, in California. He also obtained one hundred copies for his organization, “Stevie Wonder’s House Full of Toys”, and presented them to children as a gift promoting literacy. Kenny Gamble of Gamble & Huff Philly International Records, purchased the first bulk order for his Universal Institute Charter School in Philadelphia, Pa.

The series, author Stephanie Owens along with executive producer, (The Roots) Leonard Nelson Hubbard are promoted on Comcast Educational Channel 52 in Philadelphia.

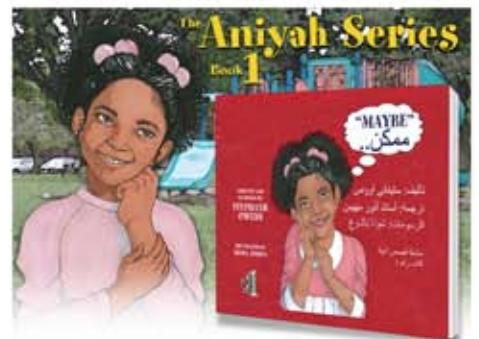

Author and Philadelphia native, Stephanie Owens feels that childhood is a gift. Too many of our young people are trying to grow up too fast and lack positive role models to teach them the importance of learning. The Aniyah Series does just that through a fun filled way of teaching and learning. We have lost too many children to violence, drugs and corruption. It is time for change. It is time for growth. It is time for, “The Aniyah Series.”
